A two-year fellowship is offered to develop competency in the scientific research process in the area of cardiovascular pharmacology. A clinical and basic science research program designed to provide the fellow with experience in the development and conduction of translational research. The program emphasizes medicine, pharmacology, and pharmacotherapy principles. Practical experience is gained in biostatistics, basic science laboratory skills, and in written and verbal communication. The program is designed to produce a sound research faculty member in experimental cardiovascular pharmacology.